Top Leadership Challenges of 2024: Expert Insights from Uravi Raichandani

As an in-house expert coach at NamanHR, Uravi Raichandani has identified several key leadership challenges that leaders often face, along with practical solutions to overcome them. Based on her extensive coaching experience, here are her insights:

Our executive coach, Uravi Raichandani, shares her expert advice on overcoming three key leadership challenges through the power of Executive Coaching.

1

The Delegation Dilemma: Empowering Teams for Success

Effective delegation is about trust and empowerment, not just assigning tasks. Yet, only 33% of managers are seen as effective delegators, according to research. Delegation, when done right, helps teams thrive, not just survive.

Executive coaching teaches leaders to:

- Build trust within their teams.
- Communicate expectations clearly.
- Delegate based on individual strengths and capabilities.

In my experience, coaching fosters this mindset shift, guiding leaders to develop their teams' skills through feedback and growth opportunities, empowering them to handle greater responsibilities.

Unlocking Team Motivation and Engagement

According to Gallup, highly motivated teams are 17% more productive, yet many leaders struggle to identify what truly drives their people. Motivation goes beyond external rewards; it's about discovering intrinsic drivers that fuel each individual.

Through executive coaching, leaders gain the tools to:

- Uncover the unique motivators of each team member.
- Align responsibilities with these motivators to enhance performance and satisfaction.
- Create a culture of appreciation and recognition, boosting engagement and retention.

3

Self-Awareness = Team Awareness

While 85% of people believe they are self-aware, only 10-15% truly are, as revealed by research. This gap highlights the importance of self-discovery in leadership, aligning personal values with organizational goals.

Executive coaching offers leaders:

- Tools for deep self-reflection.
- Psychometric assessments for critical insights.
- Constructive feedback to uncover blind spots and identify areas for growth.

By cultivating self-awareness, leaders not only elevate their personal leadership but also set a precedent for their teams, fostering a culture of continuous development and alignment.
